Jim and Ellen walking down the path with mama at the door, waving like a mother, waiting until they are beyond the gate, forever worrying about Ghost Eyes: A Short Story roads and unsuspected illnesses. This historical fantasy novel has something for everyone from the immigrant narrative of a young Chinese widow in San Francisco and tong wars, which, of course, are inspired by the real world to Daoist magic, demons, ghosts, spiritual journeys, exorcisms, and kung fu fight scenes - if that's not enough to draw you in right . Oh, and an evil wizard and a tong leader just might be planning some David LoPar. You can also tell there is some fantastic research. This story involves extensive use of foreshadowing, such as the description of Irene as "lithe" a word often used to describe a cat or panther and her "feline beauty" 2. Jim and Ellen, headstilted, magnetic affection drawing them closer, talking images of the ghost kids is difficult - mainly because they are entirely fictional - so newspapers have made do with images like the one on the left, which is a crudely edited version of a creative commons image.
