This reference to the 'midland' is inaccurate as tin production and trade occurred in the southwest of England, in Cornwall and Devonand was what drew Pytheas and other traders. Please contact us via the methods available within eBay regarding any problems before leaving negative feedback.

ToWhatEnd?In the first part of his study, Riggsby considers how Caesar defined Roman identity and its relationship to non-Roman. Caesar claimed that, in the course of his conquest of Gaulthe Britons had supported the campaigns of the mainland Gauls against him, with fugitives from among the Gallic Belgae fleeing to Belgic settlements in Britain, [10] and the Veneti of Armoricawho controlled seaborne trade to the island, calling in aid from their British allies to fight for them against Caesar in 56 BC.
