In the context of advanced globalization, the distributed agency of networked power structures can hardly be localized any longer in geographical terms. Based on a series of interviews and site visits with living artists about the role of their home in relation to their work, Kirsty Bell looks at the house as receptacle, vehicle, model, theater, or dream space. It has been occupied by Austrians and Prussians and, from the late 15th century until was the residence of the dukes of Saxony.
