Suffering cannot be eliminated, happiness cannot be guaranteed, and the new philosophers will have to BEYOND GOOD AND EVIL many painful untruths and be very courageous. For the record, I think his remarks about women have been taken much too literally and the reaction to them seems far more hysterical no pun intended than what I consider a deeper meaning. Only a tradition of hard, firm, unchanging laws and severity allows the state's continued existence; only when one no longer exists within such life and death environs does that hardness thaw and people begin to prize the individual.
